

Te Huringa o Te Ao - How it works

Service development provides an opportunity for communities to reimagine support for men by centering whānau voice

1. Onboarding

Onboarding includes whakawhanaungatanga, induction, sharing resources, and regional workshops to better understand the kaupapa.

2. Service Development

The 2.5 years of the contract (up to 9.5 years) will be flexible for providers to do both service development and service delivery.

Providers will determine what type and level of service development, if any, will enhance their support for men, their whānau and their community. Service development can include making small tweaks or refining your service, designing a small part of your service, or designing the full service, testing your service with whānau, and/or continuous improvement through service delivery. Providers will capture their service development intentions into a service development plan.

Providers will capture their service development intentions into a service development plan.

3. Service Concept

Within 2.5 years, all providers must submit a service concept. A service concept describes what you are delivering for Te Huringa o Te Ao. We will walk alongside you to develop and refine your service concept. When ready, your service concept will be incorporated into your contract.

4. Service Delivery

Providers can start service delivery immediately or after their service development. The remaining contractual period of up to 7 years will focus on service delivery.

Ultimately, Te Huringa o Te Ao aims to deliver services that support sustainable behaviour change for men to restore whānau wellbeing.